“Smoke detectors are one of the most important items in keeping your family safe at home,” stresses William F. Tretch, Fire Marshall/Battalion Chief, Rural/Metro Fire Department. “Ensuring your smoke detectors are tested monthly with annual battery changes is one way to ensure your family’s safety at home.”

Captain Andrew Skaggs, Public Information Officer, Tucson Fire Department adds, “In fact, statistics show that a working smoke alarm can reduce the chance of dying in a fire by half. As you prepare your home for the holiday season, take a moment to check your alarms; ensure that they work, are within their 10-year service life and have a working battery installed. A working smoke alarm and a home escape plan will help keep those you love, safe from fire.”
