Local School Wins National Prize School takes third place out of 141 total schools

Tucson, Ariz. – (June 18, 2008) – A local middle school was awarded a national prize for their creativity in imagining the future. The National Association of REALTORS® and the Council of Educational Facility Planners announced Imago Dei Middle School, 639 N. 6th Ave., as their third place winners in the School of Future Design competition.

The competition encourages middle school students to think of ways to redesign their school in a way that would enhance learning, save energy and preserve resources. It's also a great way to make connections within the Tucson community. The annual competition took place during School Building Week from April 27th through May 1st.

Imago Dei Middle School will be hosting a special presentation ceremony at the school on Thursday, June 19 at 1pm. The Tucson Association of REALTORS® will present them with their prize winning check.
