The 2008 Tucson Residential Housing market will be remembered as a year of new challenges and new opportunities. As new construction inventory continued to decline, short sales and foreclosures became a new source of options. VA and FHA financing reemerged in our conservative economic environment and collectively outpaced conventional financing for the first time in years.

Unit sales were the lowest they have been this decade and total volume was reminiscent of 2002 and 2003. Fortunately, new listings declined and that coupled with the decline in new construction enabled us to absorb some of the over abundance of inventory.

We urge you to study the year-end summary in detail because; it reminds us once again that we can't generalize about the market. Some neighborhoods were hit hard due to a combination of declining value and large inventories. Other areas maintained their high list to sales price ratios and faster selling times because demand and inventory counts were more closely aligned. Now more than ever, Sellers need their REALTOR® to help them effectively position their properties to sell and identify good values to purchase.

Kimberly Clifton

2009 MLS President
